"Our Four Cylinder!"
This term is probably familiar to most readers of Cincinnati journals. Time was when a four-cylinder press was regarded as the character of a newspaper. The term has recently grown into another equally potent and descriptive, which has become class this vicinity - "Metropolitan Facilities." This edition of the Pauss is printed on our new four-cylinder press. We do not suppose that to our readers it makes any difrence whether the paper which we furnish them be printed on one or a dozen cylinders. But our circulation has so outgrown the capacity of the press which we have been using, which could print 2,500 an hour, that we have been unable to deliver the Parss to subscribers as early as it was required, espe-cially by laboring-men and artisans, who would naturally care but little for a paper which they could not have in time to read before breakfast. Consequently, our circula-tion has been limited in its growth by the inability of our facilities to keep up with the demand. The Parss is now printed at the rate of nearly 9,000 an hour, therefore we shall be able to keep the forms open for th latest news, and to deliver the paper to our readers early and with regularity; and as the increase of our circulation has hitherto been limited only by our facilities for supplying the papers, we confidently anticipate an immediate and large accession to the number of our readers.

An Anti-Slavery Jonah. Dr. Cheever, of the Church of the Puritans has gone to England for sympathy and ma-terial aid in what he calls his contest with slavery in the Church. He represents himself as the only true anti-slavery apostle in the American Church, and pretends that if he is broken down, or falls for want of support, the whole Church in America will be engulfed in slavery. He said this in plain terms at his first public reception in London. and he began his speech with this appeal of a persecuted saint, as we find it in the news-

"He said he was so unaccustomed in th "He said he was so unaccustomed in the great conflict against the iniquity of slavery to the language of sympathy and kindness, encouragement and applicate, that he hardly knew how to acknowledge the great and delightful heartiness of his reception. To the friends of the enslaved the privilege was given of suffering for Christ's sake, and, up to the very eve of the abolition of slavery, that would perhaps be the result of carnest and persistent labor in the cause."

It will doubtless astonish many pious Abolitionists in this country to hear that a preacher against slavery must be unused to preacher against slavery must be unused to the language of sympathy and kindness here. It is a common impression that the way to popularity in the North is to preach against the slavery Babylon. In this respect many good men will mentally pronounce the Doctor an imposter. But he does not think himself such. He believes that he has taken higher ground than any other Church or slavery. That is, he has pronounced it a greater crime than any other Church has and has declared slave-holding, in a church member, sufficient cause for excommunica-

It is currently reported that all the while he was thundering his anathemas, he knowingly had a slave-holding member in his church, and said nothing about it; but we care not for such reports, which may be inventions of the enemy. But suppose he has taken this position, what does it amount to? Simply that a slave-holder shall be cut off from the saving agencies of the Church; and orthodoxy does not concede that religion can exist outside of the Church. There fore, excommunication means the sentence of the Church to eternal perdition, unless the sentence is taken off by repentance and submission to the discipline of the Church. Excommunication is, therefore, the judgment of the Church of eternal perdition to Logically this can not be otherwise, for to suppose that a man may go to Heaven who is unfit to belong to the Church, is simply setting upa purity above that of God. Scripturally it can not be otherwise, for excommunication and the anathama of the Church are the same thing in the Scriptures. Ac-cording to common sense it can not be other-wise, for so long as a brother has not committed a sin which merits the anathe the Church, it is the duty of the Church to try to save him, not to make haste to seal his fate by excommunication. The Church is properly an instrument of salvation; not, as many would have it, a means of hurrying Thus, if we give Dr. Cheever credit for all he pretends to, he has simply fixed up a tribunal in New York where judgment to eternal perdition is pronouced on slave-holders, and he wants the help of British bolders, and he wants the help of British money to keep it grinding. It certainly is a great cause, though slightly different from what Christ taught in regard to anticipating the judgments of the Almighty; and the British Christians ought to come down freely for an enterprise which furnishes them such vast facilities for pronouncing condemnation on their brethren in America. It is not often that so much damnation can be had for so little mosey; and as Christ shed his blood to save them, the British Christians ought to imitate his example by bleeding for the damnation of their American breth-

We might mention that Dr. Cheever bas assumed that any opposition or dissatisfacaccount of his anti-slavery preaching; and that, assuming to be a martyr to his real against the sin of slavery, as he calls it, he has appealed from the congregation of his church to British aid to sustain him. This plan admits of the largest latitude; for any inlater, whom a congregation are growing minister, whom a congregation are growing weary of, may shoose to be a martyr to some particular doctrine, and appeal to foreign aid on that speciality, to sustain him against his own people. But there can be no objections to the light in which Dr. Cheever presents the case, and it will be an adifying night to see the British Christians coming down with their cash, to establish a find to sustain Dr. Cheever in New Towk, in pronouncing, virtually, a scatence of eternal perdition on all the slave-holders in America; and as God's moral law changes not, the same sen-God's moral law changes not, the same sen-tence is pronounced on all the slave-holders who there gods before, American, British, and Patriarchal, from Abraham down, sitheogh Ohrist isbored under the impres-sion, which Saint Cheever shows to be-erronsous, that the same heat gome to beaven.
